Fortunately, however, the growth of industrialism has coincided in the West with the growth of democracy. It is possible now if the population of the world does not increase too fast for one man’s labour to produce much more than is needed to provide a bare subsistence for himself and his family. Given an intelligent democracy not misled by some dogmatic creed, this possibility will be used to raise the standard of life. It has been so used to a limited extent in Britain and America and would have been so used more effectively but for war. Its use in raising the standard of life has depended mainly upon three things: democracy, trade unionism and birth control. All three, of course, have incurred hostility from the rich. If these three things can be extended to the rest of the world as it becomes industrialized and if the danger of great wars can be eliminated, poverty can be abolished throughout the whole world and excessive hours of labour will no longer be necessary any where. But without these three things industrialism will create a regime like that in which the pharaohs built the pyramids. In particular if world population continues to increase at the present rate, the abolition of poverty and excessive work will be totally impossible.
